Palais des congrès de Montréal

Fighting Urban Heat Effect Islands

The Palais des congrès is the main showcase for experimentation and promotion of the technologies and techniques in urban farming in Québec.

Spanning 20,100 sq. ft. (1,867 m<sup>2</sup>), the project includes:

- Culti-VERT: Experimentation of green rooftops and container gardening
- Hives with a total capacity of up to 50,000 honeybees, contributing to biodiversity and pollination
- VERTical project: Urban farming project using vertical structure with scaffolds and tarps
- Urban vines: Canada's first urban rooftop vineyard and world's first in northern environment

In addition to fighting urban heat effect islands, the Lab produces honey and between 650 kg and a ton of fruits, vegetables and fine herbs each summer, fresh ingredients to be used in the dishes prepared for meeting delegates by Capital Catering. Surplus food is also donated to La Maison du Père homeless shelter.

The Palais was presented with the prestigious AIPC Innovation Award for its Urban Agriculture Lab and its innovations in sustainable development.
